Ryness is an electrical supplies and lighting expert with an unparalleled network of 15 shops in central London, providing a complete range of electrical supplies and lighting solutions for the home and trade. They also have a significant wholesale arm trading as Wholesale Lighting & Electrical, based in Islington, with Trade Counter and Telesales operations supplying the trade and numerous end users across London.

Ryness systems were mission critical and a careful project plan was designed ahead to ensure the minimum of project down-time as the sites were migrated in part between the old legacy servers (running Apache) and the new ones.

A test-bed suite was set-up to ensure any compatibility problems would be ironed out well in advance of the move. A series of instructions and documents were created to allow Ryness's in-house IT team to easily manage and configure the sites in future systems".

"Our website had been running for several years and we had built and run it all mainly in-house but we need a dedicated agency who could help update and migrate our website systems."
